The centerpiece of every Sandra Organ Dance Company season has been its annual Black History Month Dance Concerts. Starting at University of Houston's Cullen Auditorium in 1998 with the program "To Inspire Hope", SODC has brought this program to 40 other venues in the city, and brought nearly 8500 children, most free of charge. Utilizing dance to highlight the significant contributions of African Americans to our American culture and history, founding Artistic Director, Sandra Organ has created over 25 ballets in 10 years of thematic programming.

"Seen and Unseen" will be held at Barnevelder Movement Arts Complex, an intimate theatre in the shadow of Minute Maid Park, for 9 performances February 20th-25th 2009. Choreographed by Houston Ballet's first African American ballerina, Sandra Organ, this year's concerts will rift off the biography of Frederick Douglass, and offer reflections on Ralph Ellison's "The Invisible Man", as well reprise some SODC favorites in tandem with the theme "Seen and Unseen."

Sandra Organ Solis was Houston Ballet's first African American ballerina and founded Sandra Organ Dance Company after a fifteen year career where she noticed far too few faces of color in the audience. SODC promotes contemporary dance as an accessible and relevant experience for the entire family, using dance to educate, tell stories of us, as well as attract a more diverse audience.
